Materials Needed

Cardstock

Assorted Cat Eye inkpads

Colored pencils

Post-It Correction & Cover Up Tape

Scotch Restickable Glue Stick

For my project I will use beige cardstock, and the size of the project will be 6 1/2" x 6 1/2". First you need to mask off the border of the cardstock by using "Correction & Cover-up Tape by Post-It". Make a border with the 1/3" wide tape going around all four sides of the card, then you make another border edging the tape with the first border. After the second border is down you will now carefully peel away the first border, this will reveal the cardstock, and will allow you to put color in this area when you do the DTP coloring.

Next decide what images will be used for your project. I choose to use butterflies.

Making the masks: You will need more than one mask of the images. To do this use 20# copy paper, cut the paper to the size of 3" x 3" and layer them on top of each other. To keep them in place while cutting use "Restickable Glue Stick" by Scotch and glue each layer together. Stamp with black ink the image or images you want to be masked. Carefully cut directly on the black outer line or just to the inside of the outer line of the stamped image. This will help so when you pick up the mask you will not have a halo left behind on your project. After the masks are cut you will be able to separate each mask from each other, each mask should have restickable glue on the back of each of them, this will help the mask to stay in place on the project. If it does not, apply some "Restickable Glue Stick" to the back.

Stamp the foreground butterfly and mask. Next stamp the other two larger butterflies over or around the first butterfly and mask each of them. Randomly place the four smaller butterfly masks on the project (the smaller butterflies will not be stamped on the card). All of these masks will stay in place while decorating the background. Use the direct to paper technique with different colors of cat eye inkpads and go all around the project. Randomly stamp other images and when you think you have enough images stamped you can then peel away each one of the masks and peel away the border around the card. Use a smaller stamp image and decorate the border around the edge of the card. I colored the three larger butterflies with colored pencils

Layer on coordinating card stock and you are finished.
